education, training, research & development

About FLS

Focus Learning Support (FLS) UK purposes to educate and empower students, teachers, families and interested persons by bridging the educational gaps that prevent them from realising their fullest potential. FLS emphasises that educational development is a lifelong learning venture that merits continuous support from various societal organisation and institutions. To this end, FLS, with assistance from community alliances, embarks on a variety of teaching and learning, training and development, TV Programmes, research and consultancy activities to help it to fulfil its aims.

The school counselling is one of our main areas of focus to provide workshops in partnership with the BCES School Counselling Conference Team to share ideas, support and good practice that can help improve School Counselling Policies, Training programs and Practices in schools, colleges and universities at large. Our main school counselling objectives:

- Academic engagement
- Retention/achievement
- Behavioural problems – disruptive behaviour
- Diversity
- Ethnicity
- Gender
- Stigmatisation
- Bully
- Inclusive-exclusive education
- Effective teaching and learning practice
- Discipline

Current Workshop Brief

Theme: The Changing World – School counselling on embracing emergent online delivery imposed by current Pandemic and impact on achieving academic engagement

The Pandemic of 2019/2020 respectively has brought an unexpected shock to the entire World leading to emergent changes in education and employment opportunities. The current Pandemic has generated worries about the future of the young generation, mostly for the unexpected change using Online teaching and learning imposed by the current changes resulting from sudden pandemic lockdown. It is obvious that the current pandemic will have a challenging impact on education and employment, hence may seriously result to academic disengagement. We cannot be worrying about these challenges; we need to do something to protect the future of education and skills development for young people. Exploring strategies for effective school counselling to cope with the changes confronting the World today and the future of education is important.

You are invited to participate in this workshop following from the conference to hear from specialists from education and industries who will contribute ideas and suggest possible solutions for the future of education and employment and more so, how to cope with the on-line delivery to give the best to our young generation. You are welcomed to share the impact as it may affect your institutions and countries around the world.
